juveniles. But I'm persuadable, I'm malleable, and I haven't heard anything in the context of the debate so far as to which of these two populations deserves to have the resources that 882 is going to put in place to address the problems that they create. Both populations create problems, they're very significant, they can't be undercut or excused, it's just that we have a scarcity of resources and we have two different deserving claims. What I cannot tell in our debate so far is which...

SENATOR CROSBY PRESIDING

SENATOR CROSBY: One minute.

SENATOR LANDIS: ...is the deserving one. And if 882 is allowed to proceed as is, we won't have that claim. We will have the argument, should we have a work camp for nonviolent offenders. And we won't talk about which population that should be, which is the question that Senator Peterson asks us and which we ought to answer for ourselves before we address 882.

SENATOR CROSBY: Thank you, Senator Landis. Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Madam President, members of the Legislature, I knew that somewhere there was an interview that had been taken with me when we were talking about this same type of thing, and it was in 1995. I found a copy of it, and I'm going to hand a copy of it around. And it touches on the question that Senator Elmer posed to me the other day about my proposal for getting at the root causes of crime. So I'm going to hand the article around. It has my picture on it, so that should let you locate it. And that may make you not want to read it. But nevertheless, even though I'm the one who was interviewed and gave the comments, I think they are very cogent and worthy of being read. And I wouldn't have thought to say them if I didn't have that attitude about them. But here is what I have to keep emphasizing, tons of money will be spent very willingly, even by my good friend Senator Tyson, who may, on other matters, be more conservative. He says this thing that we're talking about in 882 is an expensive experiment, but we got to spend the money. Senator Wehrhein is willing to spend $68 million on a program that has failed all over the country everywhere, and he will not
